President Abdoulaye Wade, third president of the Republic of Senegal, will deliver the 15th U Thant Distinguished Lecture at United Nations University on Tuesday July 8. President Wade will speak on climate change and Africa, and specifically on how African-led initiatives, such as la Grande Muraille Verte (the Great Green Wall) can contribute to combating desertification.

Projects that foster the greening of the continent have, of necessity, a regional dimension, and in his recent speeches President Wade has highlighted the importance of the sharing of experiences, of collaborative effort, and of innovation to the success of these initiatives. His presentation will further highlight how such activity contributes to the fostering of new technologies and partnerships in the field of land and resource management.

The lecture will be followed by a question and answer session. French/English/Japanese interpretation will be provided.

We cordially invite you to attend this U Thant Distinguished Lecture. For those unable to attend, President Wade’s lecture will be webcast live and later archived at <c3.unu.edu/unuvideo/?195>.
